

I listen to a FM radio station that is a 'translator' station. This is a low power station which broadcasts the K-Love signal. Klove is a positive, family friendly station which promotes family and community relations and also give local updates on programs and events that are occurring in my local area. If K-Love were replaced by an LPFM broadcaster with other programming it is likely that I would lose one of the very few radio stations that my family can listen to without concern about the family values and language being used. I set very high standards for the language used in my house which means I would not let children in my house listen to many other radio or tv stations. These translator (or repeater) stations have an important place in our society because they fit a very specific need. My local K0love station is plays a continuous Christian music and is the radio station I prefer to listen to in my house. It is also the only radio station I can get in my area that has this programming. Other stations do not have this music only programming. To lose this station to other programming would be a great loss for the Cincinnati area. With all the other radio stations that broadcast material that is not family friendly and does not promote strong families and strong communities it would be a shame to lose one of the very few stations that does.
